Dear Sir:

As a Princetonian '52 and Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, I am deeply distressed about the article titled, "Princeton in the CIA's Service," which I have just seen in your November 12th edition.

The fact that I was so blatantly misquoted is typical of the manner in which your writers have misrepresented the facts throughout the article in an apparent effort to mislead your readers. They have used half truths and innuendo while selectively quoting out of context from other news stories to prove a preconceived thesis. Moreover, none of the authors made any effort to contact me during my visit to Princeton--or since--in an attempt to verify their facts as any responsible journalist would do.

I would invite you and/or any other representative of The Daily Princetonian to meet with me personally to prepare a more reasonable and objective article about the Central Intelligence Agency and our mission.

The dedicated Americans who work in the Central Intelligence Agency, many of whom risk their very lives to protect your freedom to publish, have been seriously maligned by an irresponsible and one-sided presentation of the facts. They, and your readers deserve better treatment.

Sincerely,

/s/ Frank C. Carlucci
